CLEOPATRA'S HARP is not obtainable. If that instrument were in the collection of your of America's wealthy citizens he would be a proud man. But the advertiser can offige an instrument of even greater value.
No less an instrument than the handsome church organ from Whitpingham Church, the Royal Church of Osborne House, the palace of Queen Victoria. To the strains of this organ the greatest Queen and Longress the world has known sang her hymns of praise and worship. Upon its keys the greatest organists of the Victorian era played. The organ would grace the most handsome home and form a priceless heiricom to hand down it to succeeding generations. It is a souvenir of the great Queen which stands alone. It is unique, Its tones are beautifully mellow, and it is in good preservation and condition.
At present it is still in use in an English church, and is about to come into the open market. Inquiries of L. V. ROGERS, 338,
